There are five state tickets in the field in Penn sylvania, viz: the regular republican, independent republican, democratic, labor, and the prohibition. In forecasting the result of the election all these tickets must be considered. Ordinarily in Pennsylvania very ttle interest is given to these sideissue tickets, as the few thousand votes they command do not have any bearing upon the result; but this year every vote counts, and a few thousand more or less than usual for the labor ticket or the prohibitionists may indirectly make or mar the fortune of the two leading parties. A prominent democrat, ex-Congressman Hopkins, of Pittsburg, who was the leading candidate against Pattison, for the gubernatorial nomination, estimates the vote for the independent ticket at 100,000; for the prohibitionists at from 12,000 to 15,000; for the labor ticket at from 30,000 to 40,000; for Beaver, regular republican, 275,000; and for Pattison, democrat, 300,000. He admits, however, that the labor vote is very uncertain; the number cast for that ticket depend largely upon whether or not the labor troubles continue until the election. It is to be taken for granted that this calculation is as favorable to the democrats as the outlook warrants. It gives Pattison a plurality of only 25,000 over Beaver, putting the independent vote at 100,000. The stalwarts claim that Stewart will not poll over 50,000 at the very outside, thus leaving a margin of 50,000 republican votes between their estimate and that of Mr. Hopkins, from which Beaver might draw enough to wipe out the advantage accorded to Pattison in the democratic calculation. Then, the labor vote might exceed the Hopkins figures, drawing more of its strength from the democrats than from the republicans; or, it might fall below those figures. the vote going direct to Beaver rather than to Armstrong, the labor candidate. The latter contingency is not very probable, however. Armstrong is a popular representative of the workingmen, and will, no doubt, receive a liberal support from them, notwithstanding there is no possibility of his election. But should the vote for Stewart fall short of the independents' estimate it is not a certain thing, by any means, that it will signify a return of independents to the regular party fold. If it shall appear necessary in order to defeat Beaver, some thousands of the independents may AND ODDS AND ENDS of WHITE VESTS that are get republican votes enough to compensate for out, and now offer you the choice of the entire lot at democrats deserted from him through the labor $1.50 each. movement and by means of other political engi-

An act of the last Maryland legislature forbidding public officers from accepting testimonials is construed to include railroad passes, to prohibit the acceptance of such favors by public servants. Maryland is not the first state by a good many to enact such a law, but if it can be enforced she will be the first to make it effective. Means of evading such a statute can always be found. In a western state some years ago where a similar law prevailed, state officers and members of the legislature turned in their railroad passes and received thousand-mile tickets instead thereof. As the law specifically forbade the acceptance of passes the officials considered that they obeyed it, and at the same time saved railroad fare by using

Vermont has adopted the rag-baby now that the outcast orphan is deserted by all the other states, and is aftempting to revive it by an infusion or transfusion of vigorous blood. At a state convention of greenbackers in Waterbury yesterday a ticket was nominated and a platform adopted arraigning both the old parties, and especially the republican, for every crime possible against a body politic. The democrats, with all their experience in platform-making, have never succeeded in turning out such a savage list of charges against

The Congressmen who voted for the river and harbor bill can afford to smile serenely at the newspaper attacks upon them. Most of them got some of the pork for their own "deestricts," and they can probably count upon being re-elected by their grateful constituency.

It is noted that the government clerks in handing in their "voluntary contributions" are apt to speak of them as "assessments." Mr. Hubbell should send them a circular advising a correction of this objectionable phraseology.

OVE IN A COTTAGE.

They may talk of love in a cottage, And bowers of trellised vine; Of nature bewitchingly simple, And milkmaids half divine. They may talk of the pleasure of sleeping In the shade of a spreading tree, And a walk in the fields at morning; But Sanford's Ginger's for me! True love is at home on a carpet, And mightily likes his ease.

And True Love has an eye for a dinner,

And starves beneath shady trees. His wing is a fan of a lady. His eyes an invisible sting: And his arrow is tipped with a jewel, But SANFORD'S GINGER 's the thing.
